MACHINERY IS ALL HERE

RAPID TRANSIT POWER HOUSE AND RAILS.

Arrive on the Iroquois With Tons of Beer and Two Heavy Steam Rollers for the Streets.

The ship Iroquois, Captain Thompson, arrived this morning, 25 days from Seattle, making the best time of any among the list of vessels delayed by the bad weather. The most interesting part of her cargo is the balance of the rails and machinery for the Rapid Transit Company.

Pain has gone to the coast to look after stuff for his company, being certain that he will get a franchise and go ahead and build when the legislature meets, and the Rapid Transit Company is so sure that it will be allowed to build that it actually has the stuff here. The Iroquois has about 2,250 tons of material for the Transit company, practically completing the shipment of everything needed for the company.

There are 3,782 rails on board and all the heavy machinery for the power house, motors, etc. On the ship John Currier, which is expected here any day now, are 201 poles, which will finish the shipments. Meanwhile the building of the road is not going on very fast, but the people of Honolulu have the abiding satisfaction of knowing that everything needed for the road is here.

Beer by the ton also came on the Iroquois. The thirstiest man in town can drink all he wants now without feeling that he is being selfish and possibly depriving others of a chance, for it will be some time before local stocks of the amber fluid run low again. There are 3,000 barrels of bottled beer and a large shipment of cask beer on the big windjammer, which brought a cargo amounting altogether to 3,700 tons, one of the largest received here for some time.

Two heavy steam rollers for the street department are another reason for Honolulu giving hearty welcome to Captain Thompson. They weigh about 40,000 pounds each, and will be a great aid to Road Superintendent Campbell.

The Iroquois had a slow trip down, but not so slow as the other recent arrivals. Had she arrived a few days ago she would have found the harbor empty. As it is she is anchored in the stream, waiting for a wharf, every berth being occupied where the water is deep enough for her. On Monday she will go to the Mail wharf and discharge there till she is light enough to be taken to the upper end of the harbor.

THE STACKERS.

The Stackers have moved their residence from Hilo to Olan, a change of climate being the object. This does not effect Mr. Stacker's connection with the Hawaii Herald.
